Purpose

This specification defines the constitutional role of the Readiness Review within the Organodynamics Discovery Methodology.

A completed investigation does not automatically justify constitutional consideration.

Before a proposed discovery enters the constitutional governance process, its methodological maturity SHALL be explicitly evaluated.

Readiness determines preparedness for review.

It does not determine correctness.

1. Objective

The objective of the Readiness Review is to evaluate whether the current methodological record is sufficiently complete, transparent, and reproducible to justify formal constitutional consideration.

The Readiness Review SHALL preserve:

Methodological rigor.

Evidence completeness.

Historical accountability.

Review transparency.

Independent reproducibility.

2. Definition

A Readiness Review is the methodological evaluation of whether a Discovery has reached an appropriate level of maturity for constitutional review.

The review SHALL evaluate preparedness.

It SHALL not evaluate constitutional acceptance.

3. Readiness Criteria

The Readiness Review SHALL evaluate whether the methodological record contains:

Documented Observations.

Recognized Patterns.

A clearly defined Problem Frame.

Alternative Explanations.

A documented Hypothesis.

Explicit Evaluation Criteria.

Completed Investigations.

Transparent Interpretations.

A documented Assessment.

Additional methodological evidence MAY be required where constitutionally justified.

4. Readiness Outcomes

A Readiness Review MAY conclude:

Ready for constitutional review.

Ready following minor revision.

Additional investigation required.

Methodological deficiencies identified.

Problem Frame requires reformulation.

Proposal withdrawn.

Every outcome SHALL preserve explicit justification.

5. Independence

Readiness Reviews SHOULD be performed independently of the principal investigators whenever constitutionally practical.

Review independence SHALL strengthen methodological confidence.

Independence SHALL remain explicitly documented.

6. Historical Preservation

Every Readiness Review SHALL preserve:

Review participants.

Evaluation criteria.

Identified strengths.

Identified weaknesses.

Recommended actions.

Final readiness determination.

Historical continuity SHALL remain reconstructable.

7. Verification

Verification SHALL demonstrate:

Methodological completeness.

Evidence traceability.

Review transparency.

Historical continuity.

Independent reproducibility.

Readiness evaluation SHALL remain independently reviewable.

8. Readiness Review Test

A Readiness Review satisfies this specification when independent reviewers consistently reach substantially equivalent conclusions regarding the methodological preparedness of a Discovery for constitutional consideration using only the documented methodological record.

9. Conformance

A Readiness Review conforms to this specification when it transparently evaluates methodological maturity, preserves explicit reasoning, maintains historical traceability, remains independently reproducible, and clearly distinguishes readiness from constitutional acceptance.

Methodological Principle

A promising discovery deserves careful investigation.

A mature discovery deserves careful review.

The Readiness Review exists to ensure that constitutional governance receives not enthusiasm, but disciplined knowledge—

knowledge whose strengths,

limitations,

history,

and remaining uncertainties are already visible before the first constitutional judgment is ever made.
